

Bibliographies & Citations

A bibliography is a list of all sources you used to find facts during your research.

A citation is specific information about each source that you used, such as the title, author, etc.

Example Citations

Example Bibliography
	Manchipp, Ben C. "The Aztecs." Chicago: World Book, Inc., 2014
	"Mexico." Junior Worldmark Encyclopedia of the Nations. Kid Info Bits, 2012. <Insert Link Here>. Accessed 25 September 2018.
	"Mexico." National Geographic Kids. National Geographic. <Insert website here>. Accessed 26 September 2018.
	"North America: Mexico." The World Factbook. The Central Intelligence Agency, 19 September 2018. <Insert link here>. Accessed 26 September 2018.

Tips:

* If no author is listed, start with the title of the book or article.

* List your sources in ABC order.

Book Citation Format: 5 Parts

Author's Last Name, Author's First Name.	Book Title.	City Where Published:
Publisher,	Year Book Was Published.

Example: Palacio, R.J.. Wonder. New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 2012.

You Try It: _____
_____
_____

Website Citation Format: 7 Parts

Author's Last Name, Author's First Name.	"Article Title."	Website Title.	Website Publisher,
Date Month Year Article was Published,	<Full Website URL Address>.
Date Month Year Date Accessed.

Example: Buchenau, Jürgen. "Mexico." World Book Student, World Book, 2019, <<http://worldbookonline.com/student-new/#/article/home/ar358800>>. Accessed 9 Oct. 2019.

You Try It: _____
_____
_____

Paraphrasing, Quoting, & Plagiarism

Paraphrasing - rewriting information into your own words and showing where you got it.

Quoting - Copying something word for word inside quotation marks (" ") and showing where you found your information.

Plagiarism - Using someone else's words (either paraphrased or quoted) and not showing where you found your information.

The following sentence about Mexico is taken directly from National Geographic Kids:

The Olmec people, Mexico's first complex society, emerged in the southeastern part of the country around 1200 B.C.

Which of the following is a paraphrase, quote, and plagiarism of the fact written above? Write your answers on the lines below.

_____ The Olmec people emerged around 1200 B.C. in the southeastern part of the country.

_____ According to National Geographic Kids, the Olmec people were the first developed society in Mexico. They lived around 1200 B.B. in Mexico's southeast region.

_____ According to National Geographic Kids, Mexico's "first complex society, emerged in the southeastern part of the country around 1200 B.C."